We'll Meet Again

Join Ann Curry, winner of seven national news Emmys, for a new series featuring dramatic reunions of people whose lives crossed at pivotal moments. The tides of history can disrupt lives, throwing strangers together or tearing loved ones apart. View history through their eyes and hear stories of heroism, hope, and the forging of unbreakable bonds among people who now have the chance to reunite with someone who transformed their life.

Amanpour on PBS

Led by CNN's Christiane Amanpour, this program features conversations about important global issues, joining a stable of trusted news and public affairs programs on public television. "Christiane Amanpour is a fearless and uncompromising journalist," said Neal Shapiro, President and CEO of WNET. "We are pleased to welcome her... and are gratified to offer this thorough and responsible news program to viewers."

Milk Street Television

Chris Kimball, in this new series, wants to change how Americans cook by bringing home a fresher, bolder, simpler way of preparing food. Chris and his test cooks search the world over looking for the best recipes, and find home cooks who can teach better ways to prepare a meal at home. The first season includes 40 new recipes, such as Central Mexican guacamole, Thai fried rice, Peruvian pesto, Japanese fried chicken, soba with miso butter and asparagus, and more.

NEW SERIES FROM ANN CURRY

Ann Curry is no stranger to southern Oregon viewers. Ann, who graduated from Ashland High School, earned her B.A. degree in Journalism at the University of Oregon and returned home to the Rogue Valley to start her career at KTVL in 1978.

On Tuesday, January 23 at 8 p.m. Curry will present We'll Meet Again, a new six-part series exploring some of history's most dramatic events through the personal stories of those who lived through them and how their lives intersected with others having the same experience at those pivotal moments.

Included are moving stories of hope, courage, and love: from a Vietnam War baby desperate to find the American father she last saw 40 years ago, to the military chaplain who helped a stranger through the trauma of 9/11; and from a Japanese-American girl interned in 1942 who never forgot the classmate who stood by her, to civil rights workers whose lives were forever changed by the deep relationships they forged in the 1960s South.

"We'll Meet Again is not told from the viewpoint of presidents or generals or kings," Curry explains. "It's from the point of view of people who were on the frontlines, who were powerless to change what was happening to them yet found ways to rise above adversity and show courage and strength and friendship, sometimes even love. I think these stories tell us something about what it means to be human."

Winner of seven national news Emmy Awards, Curry became involved with the series because "it was a way to do meaningful journalism. How do you say no to stories about real people who have experienced deeply affecting, life-changing events, and to the opportunity to help them find the person who helped them through a difficult time?"

Since my last column, a number of powerful men have been accused of sexual harassment, almost on a daily basis. PBS has not been immune, and on the afternoon of November 20, SOPTV received notice from PBS about a story in The Washington Post concerning Charlie Rose. The Post reported numerous allegations of inappropriate behavior by Mr. Rose toward women involved with his production company. PBS decided to immediately suspend distribution of Charlie Rose, which is owned by an independent television production company. We are pleased to offer Amanpour on PBS (see page 3) on our World Channel at 9 p.m. on weeknights to fill this important public affairs time slot.

On December 13, PBS also indefinitely suspended distribution of Tavis Smiley, produced by TS Media, an independent production company. PBS engaged an outside law firm to conduct an investigation immediately after learning of troubling allegations regarding Mr. Smiley. The inquiry uncovered multiple, credible allegations of conduct that is inconsistent with the values and standards of PBS, and the totality of this information led to their decision. As we go to press, a replacement has not been named.

Into the Amazon: American Experience

In 1914, President Theodore Roosevelt and explorer Candido Rondon made a perilous journey into the heart of the Amazon rainforest to chart an unknown river in one of the wildest places on earth. What was anticipated to be a relatively tranquil journey turned out to be brutal.

Tuesday, January 9 at 9 pm

America Reframed: Care

While 90% of Americans want to age at home, many of them have to rely on paid care workers because their families can't provide the support they need. Told through the stories of both care workers and their clients, learn of the many challenges and deep attachments between the elderly and the home care workers they depend on.

Influenza 1918: American Experience

In September 1918, soldiers at an army base near Boston suddenly began to die. The cause of death was identified as influenza, but it was unlike any strain ever seen. As the killer virus spread across the country, hospitals overfilled, death carts roamed the streets, and helpless city officials dug mass graves. It was the worst epidemic in American history, killing over 600,000 — until it disappeared as mysteriously as it had begun.
